Introduction

THIS is a continuation of my attempt at listing out the various authors and books mentioned within the John Crowley's Ægypt Tetralogy. This volume consists of the references for Love & Sleep in particular. Fictitious authors and books have been placed in bold typeface for easy identification, and a bibliography of real and fictitious books are listed at the end of the document.

For those that care, this project was originally done in RStudio to make use of their excellent Rmarkdown code and integration abilities, especially those concerned with BibTeX files. Once I finished it there a friend (you know who you are James...) mentioned it would be cool to have as a zine instead of a flat PDF, so I went way down that rabbit-hole before coming back to sanity. Well sort of...I'm using Lua $\text{\LaTeX}$ now, I started with $\text{\LaTeX}$ because I was familiar enough with it and it is ridiculously powerful, two things I needed if I was going to print physical zines. So, after much trial and tribulation what started out as a text file then migrated into Markdown then Rmarkdown, then to $\text{\LaTeX}$, and finally to Lua $\text{\LaTeX}$; and from letter size to half-letter zine, and now back to letter, which I'm sure highlights my own inability to commit more than anything else. Speaking of which we won't even begin to go into how many small tweaks, rebuilds, custom commands, $\text{\TeX}$ glyphs, etc. have been added, removed, created, and ultimately forgotten about to only be rediscovered at 2A.M. after wondering why things just didn't compile correctly.

It really is a labor of love at this stage, or a clear sign of a deficiency of some sort personally.

As always...any errors within are entirely my own.

JOHN CROWLEY, LOVE & SLEEP, GENITOR-2

“Pierce said to Bird and Hildy in their bungalow at night. “I already have a club. Soft of.”

The three of them were gathered at the brown gas heater, big as a chest of drawers, that stood in Pierce’s room and heated the whole of the little house. It took all three of them to light it: Hildy to direct operations, and turn on the gas; Pierce to light the match; Bird, afraid of lighting matches but not afraid of the heater as Pierce was, to thrust the lit match into the hole in the heater’s side.

“What’s your club?”

“Well, it’s secret.” He readied himself with match and box next to Bird at the touch-hole. Hildy crouched at the gas cock. “It’s a secret club of my father’s.”

“They let little kids in?”

“Some.”

“What’s the name of it?”

“I can’t tell you. It’s secret.” He saw his father’s face, binding him in an imaginary but suddenly vivid past to secrecy.”

Chapter Three

Authors Mentioned

- John Dee

Books Mentioned

- “Collier’s” — Unknown(Collier’s)
- Nancy Drew, Unknown Volume — Unknown(Adams et al.)
- Black Beauty — Anna Sewell(Sewell)
- A Dictionary of Deities, Devils and Dæmons of Mankind — Alexis Payne de St. Phalle(St. Phalle)

- Cherry Ames — Helen Wells(Wells and Tatham)

JOHN CROWLEY, LOVE & SLEEP, GENITOR-3

“When Jesus came the gods had died or hidden, the air had emptied; and at that time too, though maybe not all at once, and not because of His coming but only because the existence of a new order somehow canceled out the other even retroactively (a wind blowing backward through time that brought down the colonnades and temples and the groves of oak), those empires had Fallen. Persia had Fallen. Rome Fell. Byzantium Fell. Pierce looked again into the ruins inside the Dictionary’s cover: Fallen. One sad square of split marble half-engulfed in forgetful earth bore a single deep-incised word: ÆGYPT.”

Books Mentioned

- “Roads and Highways” — Unknown¹(Roads and Highways)

Chapter Five

Authors Mentioned

- Augustine of Hippo, St.

Books Mentioned

- “Guns and Ammo” — Unknown²(Guns and Ammo)

Chapter Six

Authors Mentioned

- None

Books Mentioned

- “Esquire” — Unknown(Esquire)

Chapter Thirteen

Authors Mentioned

- Fellowes Kraft

Books Mentioned

- Little Enosh: Lost Among the Worlds — Unknown(Little Enosh: Lost Among the Worlds)³

¹While I could not find a school reader prior to 1952 with this name, I did find one from 1941 called Streets and Roads (Gray).

²While Crowley mentions Guns and Ammo as the magazine that his cousin Boyd was reading in 1952, the actual magazine wasn’t founded until 1958. Therefore, I’ve marked it as fictitious.

³It has been posited by others that this could have been inspired by Winsor McCay’s Little Nemo in Slumberland which ran from 1905 until 1927. The only problem with that being that Pierce recalls getting “the new Little Enosh” while he was a child. This could just be another instance of transplanting one work in time by Crowley, however. After digging through Crowley’s old LiveJournal I found the following post from October 20th, 2009 titled “Novel Toons.” “Many responses to the made-up-comics-in-books question, with many people noting the presence of imagined comics within comics, either created by comic-artist heroes or read by characters (‘Fearless Fosdick’, thanks for that one). But far fewer comic strips appearing in regular books made of just words. One not noted is in my own Ægypt series — the Gnostic comic ‘Little Enosh — Lost among the Worlds,’ whose content is drawn directly from Mandaean gnostic writings, with some Sophia matter thrown in.”

- The Werewolf of Prague — Fellowes Kraft(Kraft)

Chapter Fourteen

JOHN CROWLEY, LOVE & SLEEP, GENITOR-14

“In the former time, when the world was not as it has since become, wonders and unlikelihoods were more common; Coincidence, restless, constant Coincidence, was a greater engine then, though few minds or hearts perceived all that it brought about, any more than the present age is aware of its own true springs. You can't tell, when you're asleep and dreaming, that you sleep; only when you're awake can you tell the difference”

Authors Mentioned

- Giordano Bruno

JOHN CROWLEY, LOVE & SLEEP, NATI-1

“Books disintegrate; their fires go out, which burned the senses of readers once, and leave only cinders: hard to see how they could ever have been read with reverent ardor. It comes to seem they were never read at all, that they were never even really written, that writers only accumulated them, covering pages with what looked like prose, numbering their chapters, marking their subsections, seeing them into print, where they started fires in the minds of those who only handled them, and dreamed of their insides.”

Chapter Three

Authors Mentioned

- Nicolaus Copernicus
- Marsilio Ficino
- Pythagoras
- Marcellus Palingenius Stellatus
- Socrates

Books Mentioned

- Thrice-Greatest Hermes: Studies in Hellenistic Theosophy and Gnosis... — G.R.S. Mead(Mead)

⁴Crowley mentions that it is published in 1594, which is only two years off from the first English version printed in 1592. Because of this reason alone I did not choose the original version from a decade previously, but of course I could be wrong.

⁵See Plato's Symposium (Plato).

⁶While not stated by name, the book that Val begins reading to Rosie is undoubtedly the same which Pierce had as a boy.

Chapter Nine

Authors Mentioned

- Plato

Books Mentioned

Books Mentioned

- Monas Hieroglyphica... — John Dee(Dee)
- Steganographia — Johannes Trithemius(Trithemius)

¹⁰Noted as being a book of ghost stories by Fellowes Kraft.

¹¹The bible is used by the pastor at Boney's funeral where Job 1:21 is quoted. As an aside this led to a look into the possible origins of the particular denomination that Boney belonged to, here named “The Danish Brethren.” The best I can determine now is that it was a splinter group formed after the first or second schism of the Bible Student Movement in the late 1920s, prior to gaining the name Jehovah's Witnesses.
